

THE DOMINIC TRIONFO MEMORIAL FUND

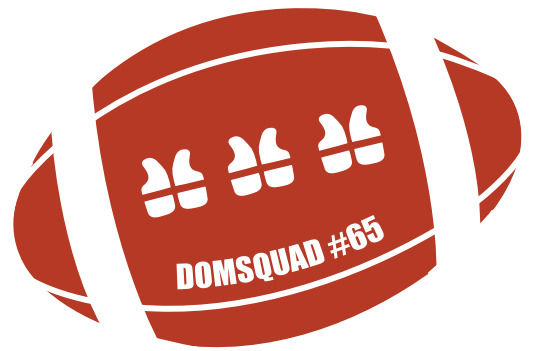

Dominic Trionfo was lovable and huggable teenage boy. As a student at Longwood High School he played football for his school and was a fan of the Mets and Jets.

He also loved the water. Sadly, he died in a jet ski accident, even though he had his license and was wearing a life jacket (also known as PFDs or personal flotation devices) when it happened. To make sure all children are having fun but being safe when they are boating, we want to teach you essential safety lessons about the water.

We hope you have fun with this activity book. You will learn some very important information about boating and water safety. For example, you should always be wearing a life jacket when you are in a boat or doing any sort of water activity.

HELPING OTHER STUDENTS

On Dom's Day, we come together to help remember Dominic and have fun celebrating him through activities like a flag football tournament. Another way we celebrate Dominic is to give back to the community through scholarship awards.

INTRODUCTION TO LIFE JACKETS

There are several types of life jackets. Some people think that just because they are in the water and are wearing a life jacket, they are being safe. Although this is sometimes the case, it is important to understand how to correctly wear a life jacket, how to choose the correct size, and what the extra rules are for because a life jacket by itself is not enough.

Life jackets can be fun. They come in all kinds of bright colors to make sure you can be seen from very far away.
